There can be little doubt, we think, that the Straits community will adopt the recommendations of the Chamber of Commerce Committee, that the local Government will restdily full in with the scheme, and that the home Government will accord its sanction. A currency that is not good enough to serve as a measure of the salaries of the public servants of a state is not good enough for the operations of trade and commerce. Not only have the Straits, like Hongkong, had for some time past to pay "exchange compensation" to officials of English domicile, but they have now had to grant a special allowance to the public servants of local domicile on account of the increased cost of living, in other words, owing to the decreased purchasing power of silver. This is termed a temporary allowance, but if the currency were not converted there can be little doubt the allowance would become permanent and disappear only with a straightforward increase of salaries. In Hongkong a similar measure has, not yet been adopted, partly on account of the difficulty of balancing the budget, and partly, perhaps, because the pinch has not yet been quite so acutely felt here as in the Straits, but on all hands complaints are heard amongst the native population of the dearness of commodities, wages are going up, and the Government-likeprivate employers will have to adapt itself to the altered conditions. The most satisfactory method of adaptation would be to pay in a coin that offered some probability of being worth as much next week as this week. As for the silver dollar, even the Banks are going back on it and decline to settle exchange forward except at very stiff rates -or perhaps it would be more correct to call them flabby rates. If Hongkong waits for China it is possible that the conversion of the currency may have to be effected at one and sixpence or -N. C. Daily News. even a shilling to the dollar, and whatever the exact rate may be it is very certain that it will be much below the rate at which the conversion could be effected to-day. When Japan announced her decision to adopt the gold standard it was said that the change would not have much effect on the value of silver, that Japan had not been absorbing much silver anyway, and that what little effect the change might otherwise have exercised had been fully discounted during the progress of the discussion. This was the view put forward by sanguine friends of the white metal, and for a time it seemed to prevail, but as soon as the operation came near enough to be correctly focussed the rate of exchange fell rapidly. Other explanations had then to be found for this singular conduct on the part of silver, and it was said to be due to being told to "cedilla," or whatever the Chinese large sales by timid holders. But what made the holders timid? Simply the Li Sun and Hei Sun. Their cogitations had not realisation of the fact that another prop had been removed, that the metal was losing its:

The Straits' have perhaps not been a very important market for silver as compared with some others, but under existing circumstances the colony's abandonment of the white metal is calculated to have a depressing effect on the course of exchange and may possibly cause as serious

The chit system in its relation to Thomas's Grill Rooms again cropped up at the Supreme Court yesterday, when another action was mentioned. In the first case a settlement had been arrived at and in the case brought forward yestorday Mr. Holmes applied for an adjournment as a settlement was probable. Mr. Justice Wise said he had remarked on the system of signing chits for drinks in a house which had only an adjunct licence simply to let the police know what was going on. He had seen from the papers that the proprietor of the Grill Rooms was applying for a publican's licence. The case was therefore adjourned.

THE 1803 SIAMESE CRISIS.

The ox-Ambassador, M. Marcel Hutin who constantly inspires the Gardois, parrates the story of the nearness of war between Prance and England in August, 1893. It may be remembered that Lord Rosebery, who was Foreign Minister at the time, afterwards stated in the speech in which he gave his reasons for resigning the leadership of the Liberal party, that for a period of twenty four hours there was actually danger of a war between France and England. The recent visit of the King of Siam to France has thus not colviled to considerable speculation us to what may happen, but has evoked reminiscences of a very critical period. The account of the writer in the Gaulous is that "In the mouth of August, 1893, when Anglo-French relations had become so strained over -the Siamese Question that an order to mobilise the British Fleet had already been secretly given, and that the ships in manouvring in the Channel were fully manned and armed, the Emperor William was at Osborno on a visit to the Queen, and aspecially to take part in the Cowes Regatto. The German Sovereign before leaving Berlin had conferred with his Chanceller. General von Caprivi about the France-Sinmese conflict, and also with his Foreign Minister, Baron von Marschall. Lord Rosebery, in view of France's formal intention to maintain der this, and in view of the Ultimatum just sent to Bangkok had sought to draw the Emperor into the Slamese question, and had tried all the barder to secure his goodwill, as Great Britain was preparing a stroke The be PATABLE on THURSDAY. the 14th Emperor sintentions were not known exactly instant. when on Aug. 2 his yacht Meleor was made WARRANTS may be had on application at (the Gaulois informant accontinated the word) the OFFICE of the SOCIETY on and after to beat Lord Dunraven's Valleyrie, which had that date passed the mark first, and the Prince of Wales a By Order of the Board Britannia. The order to mobilise the Brilish Fleet had been given. William II. was dining at the club when a telegram from his Ambassador in London informed him of the decision of the British Government to suddenly declare war against France. The Emperor rose at once, threw his naplein on the table, and telegraphed to Count Hatzfeet to protest against the measure adopted by Lord Resebery Moreover, he adminded the date of his TTHE CEBTIFICATES Not 1847 and departure from Usborne, and took the step of 1848, dated 31st August, 1897; of the declaring to the Queen that he could not con | Shares New 12801/12850 and 12851/12900 in | Methodist Idylls, by Lindsay sent to Great Britain attacking France on this Company, standing in the name of Mr. account of Siam." William IL, went on the j Gretors informant, "showed great political in sense in this circumstance. A pavel war be-tween England and France, of which the result was scarcely doubtful, would have resulted in isse assuring to the former the domination of the sea | other and of all the Colonial world. It would have been the crowning of the programme of Queen Elizabeth, Cromwell, and William of Orange. Once our navy, the only one capable of a struggle with the British Floris, had been hersen, Great Britain would have had nobody to foar. Half a century would have been needed for us and for other navies to recover, and the intervention of any other Power would have given little surjety to our neighbours. We owe no gratitude to the Emperer William for his intervention. He seted exclusively in the interests of his country, his nevy, and his Colonial and commercial expansion. But we must recognise that his intervention rendered immense service to Europe, especially at a mo-ment when overses dealings play such a large part in the lives of nations, and especially as the Franco Russian Treaty had not them been eigned. The moment was propitious for hing-land. Since then she has quarrelled with several persons, and we are no longer isolated." M. Marcel Hutin says he never felt more sorry at being obliged to connect the name of his informant, a regret in which we cordially join. The following pormus could however. time; the Harl of Dafferin, who returned in
